PROGRAM OUTCOMES (POs)

Bachelor of Science (B.Sc.)

After completing B.Sc. the students are expected to acquire:

- The knowledge with facts and figures related to various subjects in pure sciences. Understand the underlying ideas, guiding principles, and scientific theories pertaining to a variety of scientific phenomena and how they apply to daily life.
- Become proficient in using scientific equipment and organizing and carrying out laboratory investigations. The capacity for making observations and deriving conclusions from scientific experiments.
- Capacity to critically and methodically evaluate the provided scientific evidence, and has the ability to arrive at impartial conclusions.
- Possess the capacity for original thought to suggest new ideas.
- Recognize the value of interdisciplinary approaches in generating fresh perspectives and improved solutions for sustainable development. Develop a scientific outlook on life in all its facets, not just with regard to science disciplines. A highly cultured and civilized personality is the result of ingesting ethical, moral, and social ideals in one's personal and social life.

1. B.Sc. in Botany (CBCS)

Department of Botany of PDUAM, Amjonga follows the syllabus of Gauhati University. This syllabus contain papers for honors and generic programmes. The honors paper on the other hand are divided into core paper, discipline specific paper and skill enhancement paper and are distributed in all the six semesters. The programmes specific outcome of department of Botany prescribed by Gauhati University are as follows:

- Critically evaluation of ideas and arguments by collection relevant information about the plants, so as recognize the position of plant in the broad classification and phylogenetic level.
- Acquire depth and breadth of knowledge/expertise in the field of Plant Identification.

ABSTRACT

In this paper, we study on relations among consecutive elements of an equivalence class of congruence modulo m for any positive integer m . If x, y, z are any three consecutive elements of an equivalence class of congruence modulo m , then $y^2 = xz + m^2$. This is a very simple relation but unknown. For $m = 1$, we get the relation $y^2 = xz + 1$ between any three consecutive integers x, y, z . We can extend the relation to any finite number of consecutive integers. Using these relations, we prove some new results and solve quadratic congruence of odd prime modulus. Uses of this relations are the merit of this paper.

AMS Mathematics Subject Classification: 11N69, 11B39, 11A07, 11A41, 11A99.

KEY WORDS: Consecutive elements, consecutive integers, equivalence class, consecutive triples, Fibonacci's numbers, quadratic congruence.

INTRODUCTION:

Let m be a fixed positive integer. For integers a and b , we define a relation \mathfrak{R} on \mathbb{Z} as $a\mathfrak{R}b \Leftrightarrow a \equiv b \pmod{m}$. Then \mathfrak{R} is an equivalence relation on \mathbb{Z} . This relation is called congruence modulo m . This relation has m distinct equivalence classes namely, $[0], [1], [2], \dots, [m-1]$. If x, y, z are any three consecutive elements of an equivalence class of congruence modulo m , then $y^2 = xz + m^2$. In particular, if x, y, z are any three consecutive elements of $[0]$, then there exists three consecutive integers a, b, c such that $x=am, y=bm, z=cm$ and $b^2 = ac + 1$. If $a_1, a_2, a_3, \dots, a_{n-1}, a_n, a_{n+1}$ ($n \geq 2$) are consecutive elements of an equivalence class of congruence modulo m , then

$$a_1^2 + a_2^2 + \dots + a_n^2 = a_1 a_2 + a_2 a_3 + \dots + a_{n-1} a_{n+1} + (n-1)m^2$$

In particular, If $a_1, a_2, a_3, \dots, a_{n-1}, a_n, a_{n+1}$ ($n \geq 2$) are consecutive elements of $[0]$, then there exists $n+1$ consecutive integers $b_1, b_2, b_3, \dots, b_{n-1}, b_n, b_{n+1}$ ($n \geq 2$) such that $a_1 = b_1 m, a_2 = b_2 m, \dots, a_{n+1} = b_{n+1} m$ and $b_1^2 + b_2^2 + \dots + b_n^2 = b_1 b_2 + b_2 b_3 + \dots + b_{n-1} b_{n+1} + (n-1)m^2$.

PRELIMINARIES:

Definition 2.1: Any three consecutive integers x, y, z satisfy $y^2 = xz + 1$. The order tripled (x, y, z) is called consecutive triple. For a fixed positive integers $m, (mx + r, my + r, mz + r)$ where $r \in \{0, 1, 2, \dots, m-1\}$ is called consecutive triple of congruence modulo m .

Definition 2.2: [1] A Pythagorean triple consists of three positive integers a, b, c such that $a^2 + b^2 = c^2$. Such a triple is commonly written as (a, b, c) . If (a, b, c) is a Pythagorean triple, then so is (ka, kb, kc) for any positive integer k .

Definition 2.3: [2] We define a sequence of numbers as $f_1 = 1, f_2 = 1$ and $f_n = f_{n-1} + f_{n-2}$ for all $n \geq 3$. The number f_n is called the n th Fibonacci's number.

We have the following properties of Fibonacci's numbers for each $n \in \mathbb{N}$:

Definition 2.1: Any three consecutive integers x, y, z satisfy $y^2 = xz + 1$. The order tripled (x, y, z) is called consecutive triple. For a fixed positive integers $m, (mx+r, my+r, mz+r)$ where $r \in \{0, 1, 2, \dots, m-1\}$ is called consecutive triple of congruence modulo m .

Definition 2.2:[1] A Pythagorean triple consists of three positive integers a, b, c such that $a^2 + b^2 = c^2$. Such a triple is commonly written as (a, b, c) . If (a, b, c) is a Pythagorean triple, then so is (ka, kb, kc) for any positive integer k .

Definition 2.3:[2] We define a sequence of numbers as $f_1 = 1, f_2 = 1$ and $f_n = f_{n-1} + f_{n-2}$ for all $n \geq 3$. The number f_n is called the n th Fibonacci's number.

We have the following properties of Fibonacci's numbers for each $n \in \mathbb{N}$:

Articulations of Memory-Making and Memory- Mapping in Roma Tearne's Mosquito

By Sudipta Phukan

Pandit Deendayal Upadhyaya Adarsha Mahavidyalaya

Abstract: Mosquito by Roma Tearne is heavily laden with memory, a novel based on Sri Lankan Civil War. Being a diasporic writer, Tearne visualises her war-torn homeland with pain and suffering. Theo Samaratjewa, the protagonist of the novel returns to his native land after the sudden demise of his wife in London. His sole intention was to complete his fourth novel in his motherland. But destiny has played a crucial role for which he got kidnapped and suffered pathetically, due to his sympathy towards the Tamils. His connection with Nulani Mendis has brought a tremendous change into his life but a series of unwanted incidents shuffled up their normal lives. What is left behind is a golden past of which one can only imagine but unable to revive. The novel thus becomes a thread of relentless memories associated with different characters of the novel. Memory moulds and recreates the shape of the novel by highlighting devastating side of Sri Lanka and its consequences upon the lives of common people.

ABSTRACT

This study was carried out to assess the plankton diversity of Kumri beel, Goalpara district of Assam for a period of one year from April 2018 to March, 2019. Planktons were sampled in the morning hours between 6:00 and 8:00 AM by filtering 100 litres of water through standard plankton net of 70 micron (μ) mesh size. The samples were analysed using Fauna software. The study revealed very rich diversity of phytoplankton including Chlorophyceae, Cyanophyceae, Flagellatae, Euglenophyceae, Bacillariophyceae and Diatomeles and zooplankton including protozoan, Rotifer, Copepoda and Cladocera. The diversity indices analysis of Margalef D index, Shannon-Weiner and Simpson's index of diversity shows that monsoon season has the highest diversity than the other seasons whereas phytoplankton were highly dominated during the premonsoon season. Though the study revealed very rich diversity of population of plankton which indicates suitability to pisciculture the beel is under threat due to anthropogenic factors and in urgent need of conservation. Therefore strict implementation of fishery laws and preservation of the beel industries should be totally restricted.

Key words: Anthropogenic factors, Diversity, Kumri beel, Plankton.

INTRODUCTION

Plankton is a microscopic community of plants (phytoplankton) and animals (zooplankton), found usually free floating, swimming with little or no resistance to water current, suspended in water, non motile or insufficiently motile to overcome transport by currents. Apart from primary production, phytoplankton plays an important role as food for herbivorous animals and act as biological indicator of water quality. Zooplankton are heterotrophic organisms that consume phytoplankton and regenerate nutrients via their metabolism and transfer energy to higher trophic levels (Tripathi et al.

ABSTRACT: In this work, we developed a series of sunflower oil based non-isocyanate polyurethane (NIPU)-blend-epoxy hybrid materials (HNIPU) and its nano-composites with amine functionalized graphene oxide (AF-GO). Firstly, the carbonated sunflower oil (CSFO) containing five-membered cyclocarbonate groups was synthesized by the reaction of epoxidized sunflower oil (ESFO) with carbon dioxide (CO₂) at pressure 50 bar and temperature 120 °C. Then, A series of HNIPUs were synthesized by using a mixture of CSFO and the commercially available epoxy resin at different weight percentages (10, 20, and 30 wt% with respect to CSFO) by using isophorone diisocyanate as the curing agent. The HNIPU with 30 wt% epoxy showed the highest mechanical properties. Finally, the nanocomposites of 30 wt% HNIPU based composition were prepared with different wt% of AF-GO (0.3, 0.6 and 1.0 wt%) and were characterized by using FTIR, ¹HNMR, XRD and SEM techniques. These results emphasize the potentiality of this environmentally friendly approach to prepare renewable HNIPU and its nanocomposite materials of high performances.

Abstract— At present most of the state-of-the-art speaker verification systems extract speaker dependent features from the short-term spectral information which ignores long-term information that can convey supra-segmental information like prosodic and speaking style. Many powerful methods for speaker verification have been introduced now a day's such as high-level features, novel classifiers and channel compensation techniques. Although different level normalization techniques like feature level, score level and modeling level had been applied to improve the performance but still it is not sufficient an expected real time SV system. In this paper, we propose a hybrid approach language dependent speaker verification system. We first constructed acoustic-prosodic features based language model for each language using language specific speech data using GMM modeling style. Many powerful methods for speaker verification (EM) algorithm. The result reported here, have been evaluated using speech data from the multilingual speech database, namely Arunachali Language Speech Database (ALS-DB). GMM-UBM modeling technique has been applied for constructing target speaker models in the SV system. The performance of the speaker verification (SV) system using proposed approach improves up to 4.18% and 4.99% of EER levels for language matching and mismatching conditions respectively. In this case approximately 1.09% and 3.07% improvements has been observed by applying the LID module with T-Norm and D-Norm in the SV system than that of the traditional without deploying LID module for language matching and mismatching conditions respectively.

I. INTRODUCTION

In recent time, different innovative techniques have been applied to prove effective for non-independent speaker recognition and have reduced error rates dramatically. Those techniques have seen some of the main issues in speaker recognition: speaker modeling, feature level solution, channel compensation and multiple linguistic cues to speaker identity. In this paper, our main aim is to discuss a successful fusion techniques and tradeoffs in complexity in providing low error rates. In the framework of speaker verification system, the most popular speaker modeling technique is based on Gaussian Mixture Models with short-term cepstral features [1]. The most obvious advantages of GMMs are their simplicity and robustness to short-length recordings. These characteristics reflect the model's assumption that every 10-20 msec frame of speech can be considered independently. This works well when the test recording is only a few seconds long. However, as the amount of test and training data increases it becomes attractive to make use of speaker-specific characteristics which involve larger time scales, such as prosodic patterns and high level features.

Characteristics of a speaker can be represented using short-term and long-term features [2]. Short-time features are capable of reflecting the physiological difference among the speakers. The long term features mostly represent the habitual attributes of a speaker such as prosody and inflection [3]. Prosody is a term used for representing characteristics such as intonation, timing and stress in a collective manner which is less sensitive to channel effects than cepstral features [9]. Prosodic systems are especially effective when large amounts of data are available to train speaker models [7] [8]. The complementary nature of the prosodic and spectral features helps to improve the overall performance of speaker verification, while combining the advantages [3].

Prosodic information in speech signal having mainly three categories: linguistic, paralinguistic and non-linguistic. Linguistic information includes lexical stress, sentence modality, focus structure and segmentation; the paralinguistic information comprises speaker attitude, intention, dialect and sociolect. The non-linguistic deals with emotions and health [10]. It is not an easy task to extract properly feature vectors related with linguistic, paralinguistic, and non-linguistic for robust speaker verification performance in multilingual environments.

One important area of improvement in speaker verification has been in direct modeling of the spectral content of speech. Two most significant innovations have been the introduction of discriminative techniques like support vector machine (SVMs) that fused well with standard ABSTRACT: The fiction of Roma Tearne, a Sri Lankan diasporic writer, talk extensively about loss, longing and memory. Her fictions are rooted in her homeland Sri Lanka which becomes the base for her characters, plots and events. Memory, whether nostalgic or traumatic, plays a vital role in all her fictions. Cultural memory, in particular, has a great role to play in the lives of her fictional characters. An American critic 'cultural memory' as "one of the crucial dimensions of the nation's memory." The Road to Urbino, a brilliant fiction by Tearne, is the story of Lynton Rasanayagam, a Tamil from Jaffna in Sri Lanka. He was undergoing a trial for assisting a prisoner, photo printing and was denied of bail. He suffered a lot due to his Tamil identity and lost his parents during the gruesome Civil War in Sri Lanka. Later he escaped to Canada with his elder brother Sam. His explores his past life in Jaffna, his brother who was looking after his strange case of theft. His explorations contain flashes of uncontrolled memories, his struggle and obstacles faced through different phases of his work he committed the crime of stealing of the fresco. This paper is, thus, an attempt to analyze the fiction in the light of cultural memory which gets thoroughly reflected in the entire work.

1. INTRODUCTION

The very first lines of Roma Tearne's The Road to Urbino are heavily laden with memory, when its protagonist Lynton Rasanayagam dreams of his homeland, in a foreign land.

Last night I dream I was in Talseriyame again. With the ancient lighthouse casting yellow stripes across the water and the rock rising steeply against the sky... towards the lighted house I suffered with steady gaze and saw again the catarrh coolers which the rain had fattened out a smooch, and song of childhood memory (2).

Roma Tearne, hailing originally from Sri Lanka and now settled down in the UK, is the author of several novels. The background of all her works is Sri Lanka, and its association in the form of diasporic memory can be clearly visible in her fictions. In the "Introduction" to her work Memory, Nationhood, and Narrative in Contemporary South Asia, J. Edward Mullet exclusively talks about the problematic transition between memory, narrative and nationhood in South Asian countries. Different kinds of memory become the "site" "ready to return to the same, seemingly unmovable quantities of reconstructing the past" (25). Thus, Mullet observes:

Indeed, part of what makes the act of looking back so complex is the sheer variety of reasons for doing so, as this study will indicate: memory can serve to articulate or consolidate identity, validate or deny the identity of others, celebrate or mourn past events, or establish claims to agency, justice, or nationhood—serving both "good" and "bad" causes, resulting in triumphant and tragic outcomes. By the late twentieth century, however, "memory studies" seemed to become a byword for the interrogation of oppression, the search for silenced voices, marginalised and unmarked (3-4).

Memory becomes the thread of the entire narrative of The Road to Urbino. The novel mostly deals with diasporic aspects such as loss, longing, nostalgia, homelessness, racism, racism, desire to go back to the origin, and so on and so forth. In its brilliant articulation of memory, the novel shows a deeper association with cultural memory.

Multifunctional Ternary Nanocomposites of Ni/Polypyrrole/Reduced Graphene Oxide as Supercapacitor and Electrocatalyst in Methanol Oxidation

Chandrama Sarkar, Jayashree Nath, Shilpa Bhuyan, and Swapan K. Dolui^{*†}

In this work the concurrent electrochemical energy storage and conversion characteristics of Ni nanoparticles supported on polypyrrole-reduced graphene oxide (Ni/PPy/rGO) nanocomposite is reported. Ni/PPy/rGO nanocomposite was synthesized by making its precursor PPy/rGO and NiCl₂·6H₂O, where Ni²⁺ was reduced to Ni at pH 10.5. The obtained nanocomposite is characterized using FTIR, XRD, Raman Spectroscopy, SEM and dynamic light scattering methods. The electrochemical energy storage properties of the nanocomposite are investigated using cyclic voltammetry, galvanostatic charge/discharge and electrochemical impedance spectroscopy tests. Electrochemical analysis reveals that Ni/PPy/rGO nanocomposite has high specific capacitance of 765.40 Fg⁻¹ at 1.33 Ag⁻¹ current density with capacity retention of 96.72% after 200 cycles. Ni/PPy/rGO nanocomposite is also used as electrode in methanol electro-oxidation. Cyclic voltammetry and chronoamperometry are carried out to study the electrochemical energy conversion properties of the composite towards methanol electro-oxidation. The anodic current density of the Ni/PPy/rGO nanocomposite is much higher than that of Ni/rGO and PPy/rGO. Moreover, the onset potential of Ni/PPy/rGO nanocomposite is much lower than that of Ni/rGO and PPy/rGO. The results show that the Ni/PPy/rGO nanocomposite is electro-catalytically active and highly stable.

Introduction

The rapid exhaustion of conventional fossil fuel reserves the increasing concern over environmental pollution has encouraged intensive research and development of new materials to improve the performance of advanced energy conversion and storage devices.^{1–3} The electrochemical energy production will be considered as an alternative energy/power source if energy consumption is designed to be of high-performance, low-cost and environmental friendly manner. System required for promising electrochemical energy storage and conversion include fuel cells, batteries and electrochemical capacitors.⁴ Supercapacitors are gaining considerable interest because of their higher energy density and power density than batteries, faster charging time and more excellent cyclability.^{5,6} Direct methanol fuel cells (DMFCs) have also recognized to be a promising power source for portable electronic devices and vehicles, due to the abundance of their raw materials, high efficiency and low emission.^{7,8} It is necessary to develop multi-functional, low cost electrode materials which possess reasonably good performance to develop advanced supercapacitors and DMFCs.

Depending on the charge storage mechanisms supercapacitors are mainly classified into two broad categories. First category is electrical double layer capacitance (EDLC), which stores energy based on the reversible adsorption/desorption of ions that takes place at the interface between the electrode materials and the electrolyte. EDLC is based on carbonaceous materials that possess high power density but low capacitance. Carbonaceous materials have a common capacitance value of less than 40 μF cm⁻² of the real surface, which is an immense weakness for EDLC.^{9–12} Another category is pseudocapacitor, a pseudocapacitor stores energy from rapid surface redox reactions that takes place on the surface and the near surface of the electrode materials. Pseudocapacitor based on metals, metal oxides or conducting polymers possess high specific capacitance but due to low conductivity it suffers from poor cyclability.¹³ Hybridizing EDLC and a pseudocapacitor can enhance the electrochemical performance.^{14,15} For example, Subramaniam et al.¹⁶ reported that amorphous MnO₂ single walled carbon nanotube composites showed enhanced electrochemical properties both with respect to high rate capability and the discharged capacitance due to the inter-connection of MnO₂ and SWNTs.

DMFCs possess high energy density and easy solubility of raw materials compared to hydrogen fuel cells.¹⁷ However, high manufacturing costs and slow rate of methanol oxidation reaction on the anode of the fuel cell have limited the commercialization of these fuel cells.¹⁸ In order to overcome these problems a great deal of research has been carried out including detailed studies on Pt-based electro-catalysis in acidic medium.^{19–22} But unfortunately, the commercialization of the Pt electrocatalyst is significantly hindered by the limited resource of Pt, high cost, low power density and poor CO-poisoning tolerance.²³ We are searching for a new low cost

ZnS co-doped Eu³⁺ Silica matrices were fabricated by sol-gel route. The fabricated matrix was characterized by XRD and EDX. Optical characterizations were performed by Absorption as well as PL Spectroscopy. Structural characterizations show the presence of ZnS particles (ZnS NPs) embedded in the Eu³⁺ doped Silica matrix. The study reveals an increase in PL intensity with ZnS concentration owing to the structural modification of the Eu³⁺ in the host matrix as well as energy transfer from the ZnS NPs to Eu³⁺ ions. The observations are in the light of Judd Ofelt intensity parameters as well as radiative parameters.

1. Introduction

Rare earths (RE) form an important class of optical materials. These are very promising active ions with a lot of applications, viz. in the field of lasers, colour displays, remote sensing, data storage, optical communications, photovoltaics, sensors and so on [1–3]. REs are the lanthanides with electronic configuration [Xe]4fⁿ 5d⁰ 6s² along with Scandium ([Ar]3d¹ 4s²) and Yttrium ([Kr] 4d¹ 5s²) and generally exist in the tri-positive state. The partially filled 4f shells shielded by 5s and 5p shells lead to intra-configurational 4f–4f transitions yielding characteristic sharp absorption in the ultraviolet – visible (UV-Vis) region and sharp as well as stable emission in the visible – near infra red (Vis-NIR) region. Even though these RE transitions are sharp, they possess significantly low absorption co-efficient leading to their low emission intensities. Moreover, in free state, the RE electronic transitions are forbidden by Laporte's selection rule. When the RE ions are put in a suitable host, the electric field of the host removes the degeneracy of RE energy levels via Stark splitting and admixes the high energy opposite parity levels, thus making these transitions possible [4]. Europium ion (Eu³⁺) is well known for the simplest energy level structure and strong emission in the visible range. The ground state of Eu³⁺, ⁷F₀ is non-degenerate and the excited states ⁵F_j (j = 0 to 6) and ⁵D_j (j = 0 to 4) are well separated which make it valuable for application in phosphor and lighting technology as optical probing [4].

Among different hosts, silica glass gets large attention due to its various advantages, such as optical transparency in the visible region, homogeneity, superior chemical and thermal stability, strong thermal resistance, non-toxicity, simple fabrication etc [5]. The silica matrices are usually prepared by sol-gel method and possess benefits like precise control over quality, versatility in shape and size of the products and low cost [6]. Even though the residual hydroxyl groups present in the silica matrix prepared by sol-gel method play a detrimental role in the Photoluminescence (PL) efficiency of RE ions, there have been continuous efforts among the scientific community towards the enhancement in optical efficiency of RE ions in silica matrix, to harness its superior physical properties and its optical transparency. Introduction of sensitizing agents, co-doping with secondary RE ions, semiconductor and metal nanoparticles (NPs) etc. are some of the methods [7–9].

The resultant absorption by RE ions in a host matrix can be augmented by modifying the host network, thus modifying the ion environment as well as by utilizing energy transfer from the sensitizing ions/molecules with higher absorption co-efficient. The modification of the host matrix is useful in tackling the long-standing issue [7] as well. ZnS is a direct band-gap II-VI semiconductor with high absorption cross section in the UV-Vis region

Plan 53

Speed up the process of registration of college's Alumni Association and keep the Alumni updated on the college progress and development.

Alumni Engagement:

The college has taken initiative to form an Alumni Association of PDUAM Amjonga named 'Alumni Association PDUAM Amjonga'. In regard of this an Alumni meet was organised on 3rd December 2022 where the Alumni of this college had actively participated and in the same day an Alumni Committee was made according to UGC guidelines. Here it is important to mention that as the institution was established in 2017, and therefore it has very few numbers of Alumni. Despite the fact that the college now lacks a registered alumni association, the PDUAM, Amjonga Alumni Association actively participates in the development process of the college. A few alumni of this college are recently employed and some are still perusing higher education, so they are not in the position of proving financial support to the college but are in good contact with the college and are ready to provide any other kinds of support. The PDUAM Amjonga Alumni Association occasionally offers insightful recommendations for the institution's administrative and academic growth. The Alumni are responsive with regard to the healthy environment of the college premises and for this they have planted saplings of various horticultural plants at college campus. College alumni donated many significant volumes of books to various departments. Additionally, college graduates offer advice on how to set up the laboratory and other academic-related issues. Our Alumni are in contact with faculty members of respective departments and also with the authority physically and virtually and are always ready to provide their help and support whenever necessary.
